MOSCOW ASKS REDRESS FROM ITALY TODAY

Soviet May Use Force to Amend For Submarine Attacks

HOPES PINNED ON MEETING FRIDAY

Charges Hurlled At Mussolini By Red Army's Newspaper

(By Associated Press)
WASHINGTON, Sept. 8.—Secretary Hull characterized the activity of unidentified raiders in the Mediterranean today as a promiscuous situation growing gradually more acute.

He said he had discussed it with Chairman Kennedy of the Maritime commission.

(By Associated Press)
MOSCOW, Sept. 8.—The Red Army's official newspaper served notice today that the Soviet government will use force "to call Italian sea pirates to their responsibility" if peaceful moves fail.

The newspaper Red Star declared the Soviet government was determined to obtain redress from Italy for the sinking of two Soviet ships which the government attributed to Italian submarines.

If Friday's proposed conference of Mediterranean powers fails to obtain that redress, the Red Star said, Soviet Russia will use its own means.

The newspaper attacked Italian Premier Mussolini for "trying to evade a new Roman empire."

It declared the Soviet government "will find the necessary means for calling sea pirates to their responsibility and forcing them to fulfill legal demands" of Moscow.

The Soviet government agrees to discuss any collective measure which would end "the intolerable situation in the Mediterranean," the newspaper said.

But it added that Moscow "will insist that Italy satisfy all (the Soviet government's) just demands."

Booth Rites Held At East Liverpool

(By Associated Press)
EAST LIVERPOOL, Sept. 8.—Members of the Ohio State university football team and coaching staff, fraternity brothers, friends and admirers gathered here today to pay their last respects to William (Bill) Booth whose brilliant gridiron career was cut short by an automobile accident Saturday afternoon.

The 21-year-old O. S. U. junior was buried beside his mother in Riverview cemetery following funeral service at 2 p. m.

Several thousand persons filed past his flower-bedecked bier Tuesday night, paying silent tribute to his memory. Tied on tier of floral baskets and wreaths fittingly showed the respect and honor he commanded.

James McDonald of Springfield and Ralph Wolfe of Youngstown, captains of the 1937 Ohio State team; John Cox of Steubenville, a fraternity brother; William Laughlin and Robert Stewart of East Liverpool, former high school football teammates, and James Jones of Newell, W. Va., a lifelong friend, bore the casket to its final resting place.

Crisis Looms as Russia Calls Italy "Pirate"

Maxim Litvinoff Count Galeazzo Ciano

New war clouds loomed on the European horizon after Russia formally accused Fascist Italy of sinking two Soviet ships in the Mediterranean during a recent outbreak of submarine "piracy" and demanded indemnity and punishment of those responsible for the attack. Count Galeazzo Ciano, Italian foreign minister and son-in-law to Mussolini, informed Moscow that the charges were rejected and would not be considered further by Italy. The Russian note of protest followed several mysterious submarine attacks indicated on the map with the dates at which the incident occurred.

Public Assistance Board Is Organized For County

LISBON, Sept. 8.—The organization of a Board of Public Assistance and the employment of a county supervisor to consolidate dependent children aid and blind relief under one county department, was announced today by Probate Judge H. W. Hammond.

GIRL, 20, SLAYS FATHER OF TWO

Illicit New Jersey Romance Ends In Tragedy Today

(By Associated Press)
ISELIN, N. J., Sept. 8.—A 20-year-old school girl admitted after hours of questioning today, Police Chief George E. Keating announced, that she fatally shot Paul Reeves, 25-year-old father of two children, when he attempted to assault her.

The Woodbridge township chief gave the girl's name as Margaret Drennan and said she was a student at a New Brunswick secretarial school. She was the "lady in red," Keating said, who was seen running from the bungalow where Reeves was shot to death in his bedroom last night.

Reveal Threats
She had been taken into custody shortly after Reeves was found nude and dying in his room. His children, Paul, 5, and Emma, 2, were found whimpering and cowering under the sheets in their adjoining bedroom.

Reeves was called by police from a Railway theater, reaching her husband a few minutes before he died in a hospital.

Keating quoted the Drennan girl as saying she went to Reeves' home because Reeves threatened to "reveal their previous love trysts to her family if she failed to do so."

The young woman, the chief said, used a .32 caliber automatic owned by her father. The gun, Keating added, was found in a dresser drawer in her bedroom at her parents' home.

Reeves, Keating said, was shot once in the abdomen and once in the foot. Next door neighbors had reported they heard five shots.

trustees of the Fairmount Children's Home and were selected because of their familiarity with juvenile aid problems.

At a recent meeting Judge Hammond was elected chairman of the board and Owen secretary. The members at this time decided to employ a full-time supervisor and empowered the judge and Berg to select a properly qualified person for the post.

Miss Schneider, who was chosen for the position, is a graduate of Seton Hill college at Greensburg, Pa., and the holder of a master of science degree from Western Reserve university. She has been employed by the Catholic Community league in Canton, and the Cleveland Children's bureau. For the past year she has been engaged as instructor in child welfare at Boston College School of Social Work.

BANDIT GANG KILLS MAN, 52, IN YOUNGSTOWN

Shoot Down Beer Garden Proprietor and Flee With $5,000

JIM TISONE IS GUNMEN'S VICTIM

Gang Flees Toward Pennsylvania Border After Holdup

(By Associated Press)
YOUNGSTOWN, Sept. 8.—A young bandit gang shot and killed Jim Tisone, 52-year-old beer garden proprietor, grabbed about $5,000, and fled in an automobile as a screaming crowd watched the hold-up in front of Tisone's cafe, at 11:45 a. m. today.

One of two bullets struck Tisone in the chest as his daughter, Mrs. Ruby Palasi, rushed, gun in hand, from the beer garden to aid her father. She was quickly covered by a bandit's gun.

Tisone was dead when delivered to St. Elizabeths hospital.

At least three bandits, all armed and all young, staged the hold-up, just as Tisone halted his automobile in front of his place, bringing money from a bank to cash pay checks.

Police and state highway patrolmen joined in the search for the gunmen who fled eastward in a black Ford coach, bearing Connecticut license plates, HR 453.

Surround Car
One gunman leaped to the running board of Tisone's car as it stopped and demanded the money. Another moved to the other side of the car, and held off persons who stood near. A third strode toward the beer garden door, as Tisone's daughter appeared. Several persons said a fourth bandit was waiting in the bandit's car.

Tisone opened the door of his car and began to step out. A gunman reached for the money, and as Tisone struggled to keep it, the gunman fired twice.

Getting the money, the gunmen ran to their car and sped away. Harry George, an employee at the beer garden heard a shot, rushed next door to a store, got a gun, and fired one shot at the fleeing bandits.

The shot is believed to have hit one of the gunmen in the shoulder.

Council Boosts Police Force To Six Men, Including Chief

Salem's police department today was a five-man force, not counting Chief Ralph Stoffer, following approval by city council of an ordinance increasing the personnel from four to five regular patrolmen.

The new "regular" is Clifford Todd, newest member of the force who has been working only part time.

Two of the officers will work during the day, along with the chief, while the other three patrolmen will work "night trick."

Those scheduled to work days are Patrolman Nerr Gaunt and James Haskey. At night Patrolmen George Reash, Paul Ormsby and Todd will be on duty.

Sought Fifth Member
Mayor George Harroff, the mayor's advisory board, Chief Stoffer and Safety Director C. E. Donahy had recommended the appointment of a fifth full-time patrolman.

The ordinance, passed last night as an emergency measure, was introduced upon a motion by Councilman C. F. Zimmerman and Paul Myers.

Council at its meeting also approved a new contract with the Farmers National bank, depository for the city's funds. The new agreement, approved by City Treasurer Orvil Hoover, was drawn up merely to conform with new state and federal requirements.

Five regular employees of the water works pumping station, in a petition presented council, asked that they be allowed an annual two-weeks vacation with pay. The request, signed by George Kennedy, Joseph Andrew, James Cavanaugh, Howard Russell and John H. Horn, was referred to the ordinance committee.

No Parking Zone
Council's safety committee, headed by Paul Myers, recommended that a no-parking zone be established on N. Howard ave., between W. State st. and the Stark Electric railway tracks, in order that large buses now using that route in an attempt to avoid the downtown traffic, would not be held up by automobiles parked on the narrow thoroughfare. Council approved the suggestion upon a motion by Members A. P. Morris and Charles Rheutan.

The latter solon expressed publicly his appreciation of the policeman's good direction of traffic through the city during the Labor day weekend.

Pay For Engineer Studied By County

LISBON, Sept. 8.—Prosecutor Karl Stouffer expects to confer today with county auditor John Irwin regarding a ruling on the matter after the Ohio supreme court, granted a stay of execution on an appellate court decision ousting Robert S. Wheatley from the office because he was not a registered engineer when elected.

Wheatley continues to hold the office, pending the supreme court decision on the case. If the supreme court upholds the appellate court's decision, the office will go to Lloyd C. Kirk, former county engineer, who was defeated by Wheatley in the last general election.

COUNCIL ACTS TO REGULATE NEW BUILDING

Recommends Ordinance Creating Commission Of 5 Members

SOLICITOR DRAFTS NEW LEGISLATION

Systematic Planning foreseen by Members of City Council

A planning commission, designed to control and restrict building improvements in all sections of the city, received the unanimous support of city council Tuesday night when the councilmen at their regular meeting gave City Solicitor Lozier Caplan the authority to draft an ordinance necessary to create the commission.

The proposal to establish a planning commission here was talked of several weeks ago. The group was never formed, however.

Fine On Commission
Seeking to have buildings and their locations conform with each other as much as possible, the solons accepted the solicitor's recommendations last night and urged introduction of the required ordinance at the next council meeting.

Members of the planning commission, of which there will be five, will be appointed by Mayor George Harroff, following passage of the ordinance creating the new city body.

The citizens chosen to serve on the commission will do so without compensation. Their recommendations from time to time will be acted upon, either favorably or otherwise, by city council.

The only expense incurred will be when maps, necessary to study some zoning problem, will have to be made.

The motion recommending that the planning commission ordinance be drafted for council approval, was introduced by Councilmen E. H. Taylor and A. P. Morris.

A more systematic planning of new construction about the city, especially in the business district, is expected to be gained through the operation of the commission.

City Buys Truck For Service Dept.

Purchase of a new one and one-half ton truck for use by the service department was authorized by city council Tuesday night when the solons approved an ordinance transferring $1,131.88 from the motor vehicle license fund to street maintenance and repairs fund to allow for the purchase.

The vehicle will be purchased from the Long Motor Co., lowest and best bidder.

Service Director Frank Wilson asked city council for the new truck June 2, citing at that time the bad condition of the old truck now in use.

Street Improvements Are Studied

Members of city council's streets, alleys and sidewalks committee will meet with members of the board of education Monday night to discuss plans for improving certain streets near school buildings. Councilman C. F. Zimmerman is chairman of the committee.

Safety Director C. E. Donahy advised council last night that a new traffic signal light would be installed at the intersection of S. Broadway and Actna st., within a few days.

Mayor George Harroff reported court collections for August totaling $709.15. This included: Fines, $544.35; costs $72.80; building permits, $15 and licenses, $77.

Council instructed Service Director Frank Wilson to have the street curb at the east intersection of Betna st., and S. Lincoln ave., rounded.

SHIFTING FOUNDATIONS

Suppression of former Premier Paderewski's public manifesto against totalitarianism, by the present Polish government, is another pointed reminder of the speed with which political foundations are shifting in "our windy world, where what's up is faith and what's down is heresy."

Paderewski, once a Polish hero, today is the victim of the "discipline" of the nation he did so much to create after the World War. The reverse is true in Germany and Italy, where men who in the early twenties were political outcasts now wield dictator's whips.

In Russia, men whose loyalty once was unassailable now are being disposed of by execution, exile and disgrace. The ground under their feet is shifting more rapidly than they can spring into new attitudes to save themselves.

In the United States, John N. Garner, who in 1932 as the "other man" on the Democratic ticket sent cold shivers up and down the bowed backs of the nation's conservatives, today is proposed as a likely candidate to reassure his party's moderates.

BELOW 1,500,000

The amount of money spent by WPA during August should be the smallest in the history of that branch of work relief. There was a continuous decrease each week during the whole month, and in July WPA spent less money than it ever had spent in a single month before.

Total enrollment now stands at less than 1,500,000, another low mark. The drop has been caused by two things: greater opportunities for private employment and a policy of decreasing WPA rolls. Officials say that policy now has been suspended.

Though further decreases are predicted for September, winter will bring an upswing. No one knows how great it will be, though it is not expected to come anywhere close to the more than 3,000,000 total reached at the peak of WPA enrollment in February, 1936.

When the figure is known, it will represent an approximation of the size of the work relief responsibility which the national government has accepted. Apparently, what WPA Administrator Hopkins calls permanent unemployment is going to be somewhere between a lower limit of a little less than 1,500,000 and an upper limit to be established during the coming winter.

SENTIMENTAL OCCASION

Colleagues and some high school students can understand, but few elementary scholars are old enough yet to see why the opening of school is a sentimental occasion.

In years to come, though, they, too, will understand what it means to start off to school in September, to be in a new class, to meet new teachers, to set a new goal and to travel toward it with new books and new hopes.

They will understand what it means to mothers and fathers to send off a cherubic toddler to the first grade, an awkward adolescent to high school and a confident young man or woman to college.

They will yearn again for the smell of chalk dust and clean paper. They will long to feel again the excitement of new surroundings and different interests. They even will wish they could sit once more in a schoolroom wishing they could be outside doing something else.

Why? It's so simple. Each school year is a new experience—guaranteed to last not more than nine months, in case it becomes monotonous. There's nothing like it afterward, when success and failure both run on, year in and year out with no vacation to break the monotony and no Septembers to mark a fresh start and a new goal.

THE BIG CHANCE

Men, they complain, show no originality in dress. That is, women complain; men are proud of their originality.

The big chance is the straw hat, which becomes as original after Labor Day in some communities as a drum major's shako or a crimson shawl tied around the head. Yet, thousands of willful males annually defy the edict and go right on wearing straws just as though they didn't give a hang.

It's simply that they enjoy showing their independence. It's about the only spree of rugged individualism they dare to indulge. Even the conformists, who complacently laid their straw headpieces in the ashcan at sunset on Labor day, are proud of the "backwardness" of their non-conforming brothers. Hats off to 'em. May they hold the fort till snow flies.

THE STARS SAY:

For Thursday, September 9

Peculiar planetary vibrations, involving factors of the occult, mysterious, subtle and intriguing, as well as disruptive, are dominant in the affairs of this day. Great caution, vigilance and wisdom are necessary in order to circumvent situations that might prove devastating and curiously detrimental to future plans and wishes.

Those whose birthday it is may be prepared for a year in which sudden and quite unforeseen situations may prove a detrimental and devastating force unless met with vigilance and sagacity. Strange and subtle influences seem to menace not only business but secret affairs, and an element of strife, jealousy and intrigue may affect the intimate or sentimental relations.

A child born on this day may have a restless, unsettled, erratic and unfathomable nature, which might be due to inventive or artistic genius, romantic urges, or psychic idiosyncrasies which, properly developed and directed, might be expressed in unusual adventures or novel trends in art, music or literature.

O. O. MCINTYRE

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—New York's most temperamental restaurant man is George La Maze. Sometimes he works in the kitchen, sometimes as a maitre d'hotel but wherever he is the diner knows he is about and senses his touch of artistry. Perhaps a better title for him would be host.

He rarely remains in one spot long. As soon as a place becomes too successful he tires of it and is off to new pastures. He is equally well known in Philadelphia, Hollywood, Saratoga, Miami and Palm Beach. La Maze was the first restaurateur to abolish the printed menu.

Instead he uses a portable black-board with the choice dishes chalked so big no one has to squint or fish for eyeglasses. He believes there are enough gourmets in every community who will pay any price for the best food and he has proved it. He caters only on the grand scale.

Wherever he is he has choice potatoes shipped from Idaho, select ducklings from Long Island and the prime catches of shrimps and crabs from the Gloucester nets. He goes to the markets himself at daylight—and that's a custom too many chefs are abandoning.

It is interesting to know what the other fellow eats. I never dine out and behold what has been brought to the next table without regretting I did not order the same. There is a trencherman who will dine only in places with booths for that reason. He was constantly having his meal spoiled by seeing the more tempting dishes that came to his neighbors.

At a weekend in Saratoga a while ago I had a close-up of what some headline names enjoy after the races. Alfred Gwynne Vanderbilt was doing dandy with a Chateaubriand a la Cordon Rouge, which consisted of a double fillet of beef basted with butter, seasoned and sprinkled with finely chipped ham and fresh bread crumbs. The entire bit garnished with sliced truffles, brussels sprouts and small stuffed tomatoes. Jock Whitney nearby showed contempt for calories and also the reason perhaps for a growing waistline. He was dallying with what looked to be two miniature gondolas. They were boat-shaped banana skins filled with whipped cream, the sliced bananas previously steeped in Kirsch. Herbert Bayard Swope was handling an interesting looking salad of filleted smoked herrings, cold beef, boiled potatoes, sour apples, all diced, chopped capers and gherkins, seasoned with French dressing. Then Joan Bennett, or her double, toying with something scrumptious in desserts—Bartlett pears cooked in vanilla syrup, perched on a timbale of rice flavored with maraschino and all covered with meringue and baked. Hawkins, my drooling bib!

Harry Kemp, so-called tramp poet, seems last of familiar characters, such as Bobby Edwards, Sonia the Cigarette Girl and Tiny Tim, to cling to Greenwich Village. He still has quarters in Washington Square but has become somewhat a recluse. He's no longer a figure at the bars and waffled parlors, but has become serious about knowledge and is an earnest student at the W. P. A. Adult Educational classes—where Sanskrit, Hebrew, Chinese, Japanese and Arabic are taught free. Incidentally, in studying Japanese he discovers the meaning of the word "hobo." Flint, Wyckoff and Jack London, delvers among the submerged, guessed at a definition but never knew. Kemp finds it is from the Japanese "hobo"—meaning on all sides, everywhere.

I have a post card from Mason Peters, born at my birthplace, Plattsburg, Mo., who has returned there after years to look at the old home and perhaps refurbish it. Peters was a New York newspaperman of the days of Richard Harding Davis and celebrated as a wit around the Lambs along with Wilton Lackaye, Willie Collier and other trigger-tongued and nimble minded. Several years ago he decided the metropolis was no place to live and hiked to Arizona where he has been prospecting and doing all right. Another Plattsburg, Mo., born boy, is the film character actor, Sidney Toler. He was born there in a covered wagon while his parents were migrating west. Harry Slivey knows a fellow who held a winning ticket in the Irish Sweepstakes but does not live in the Bronx!

ACCIDENTS

THIS IS the time of year when the "week-end" is particularly popular. The desire to get to the mountains, country or seashore is universal and well understood.

But, unfortunately, the importance of a safe observance of this holiday is often overlooked. Consequently, many unnecessary casualties occur.

There has been a marked increase in the number of accidents resulting from careless driving over week-ends. The desire to get to the country in a hurry may mean the taking of an unnecessary chance in traffic. This is a common cause for many a serious automobile accident. What started out to be a pleasant week-end may mean a trip to the hospital. An innocent passenger may suffer a serious injury because of some hasty careless driver of another car.

Drownings Increase

The increased popularity of swimming at this time of the year is another danger that must not be overlooked. Unnecessary risks and carelessness in swimming and diving are much too frequently overlooked during a week-end. Authorities point out that the increase in drownings is alarming. More rigid enforcement of safety rules is needed, as well as more considerate co-operation by week-enders. Take heed of this warning and avoid all unnecessary risks.

Let me remind you of the danger that is associated with excessive exposure to the sun. Very often one is anxious to obtain that envied coat of tan, within two or three days. It cannot be obtained in this manner, certainly without possible disaster. Sudden and prolonged exposure to the sun will lead to a serious burning of the body. If you are desirous of a sun tan, remember that you must expose your body gradually to the sunlight. This gradual exposure is especially advised for blond and fair individuals. Their skin is unusually sensitive to the rays of the sun and the utmost caution is required. Children and infants must be guarded against sudden and prolonged exposure to the sun.

Overeating, carelessness in the choice of food, inadequate hours of sleep, excessive fatigue and over-exertion are other dangers. They must be avoided in a week-end trip. If you are to obtain the maximum benefit from your short stay in the country, it is well that you avoid these pitfalls to health. Unless these precautions are taken, you will not receive any benefit. Undoubtedly you will return to your work feeling below par, and in need of a real vacation.

"THE CAPTIVE BRIDE"

by BARRETT WILLOUGHBY

CHAPTER XL
The trapper's fumbling hand had found the camp ax, left leaning against the cabin front. He stood now, feet braced, and the glinting blade poised above one shoulder for the sweeping two-handed blow that would, when Tongass sprang at him, leave the husk bloody and useless on the snow.

"Go back, Tong!" warned Denny. "Run! Run! He'll kill you!" At the sound of her voice, the dog's ears twitched; but he continued his stealthy advance, his high and shoulder muscles bunching and rolling in preparation for the spring.

"Tong! Tong!" Denny shouted frantically. "Run! Run! Forget the dog, he's trying to wrench it out of your hand, when a new voice, sharp, authoritative—rang from the edge of the clearing:

"Tong! To heel! Stebbins! My hunter's trained on you. Don't make me use it!"

Denny's hands fell limply to her sides. In the excitement of the moment she had not connected Tongass' appearance with his master; and even now her only reaction to a sudden arrival was a thankful, "We're safe! Both of us!"

"Drop that ax, Stebbins!" commanded the invisible Bourne. "Now over to your campfire."

Denny heard snow crunching under retreating feet; heard Stebbins' paws yapping and whining at the edge of the clearing; saw she gathered herself together and peered out.

The trapper was shuffling toward the sled. Behind him, looking very tall in his white, belted parka, walked Bourne. Moonlight glinted on his bare head and on the blue metal rifle that rested in the crook of his left arm. Tongass paced stiffly at his heels.

As the procession halted before Stebbins' sled, Bourne snatched the man's holster from the blankets and, removing the cartridges, stamped them into the snow. His quiet voice carried to Denny, "Load up and harness your dogs."

When the team was ready for the trail, Denny saw Stebbins reach guardedly for his dog whip and, keeping his gaze fixed on Bourne, back the length straight out behind him on the snow. She saw his shoulders sag forward and a little to one side; sensed, rather than saw, a peculiar stiffening of his lean body; divined, in a flash, that another instant would see the tip of his lash snap out to score the moonlit face of Bourne.

A vision of the bleeding rabbit swam before her eyes; but before she could draw a breath to scream a warning, Bourne said coolly, "Try it, Stebbins. You might get my eyes that before I could move, but I haven't the nerve. You can poison dogs. And terrorize women. But when it comes to dealing with men, you have to shoot them in the back."

Bourne made no move to lift the rifle; but his face, a little out-thrust, seemed to level something more compelling than cold steel at the man with the whip. For a moment Stebbins maintained his position, malignant hatred in every line of his threatening stance. Then his tense frame slumped. Fumbling, he began to gather in and loop up the long length of his whip.

"Stebbins, you got a beating once for poisoning a dog of mine. Tonight you earned a killing and you just barely escaped it. But from now on, walk wide of me and mine; for you'll never be so lucky again. Now, get going."

The river captain's voice revealed from depths in his nature what Denny had never before suspected. A faint chill ran through her. She did not wonder that Stebbins moved instantly, uttering the first words he had spoken during the encounter—a command to his lead dog.

When his team started for the river he leaped aboard the sled and passed quickly from Denny's arc of vision. But by that time she had ceased to think of him. Her thoughts were on the man left standing at the edge of the clearing—the man who was her husband. She had seen him conquer and dominate a dangerous enemy by the use of his will and spirit; and for the moment she was paying Reverly Bourne the tribute of her unalloyed admiration and respect.

Bourne tucked his rifle under his arm and started for the cabin. In an uprush of thankfulness for her deliverance, Denny waited to meet him with complete honesty, ready to express her gratitude and to confess herself at fault. At fault, not because she had attempted to escape—that resolve remained as firm as ever—but because she had left Tarnigan in company with a man about whom she knew nothing, save that he was the enemy of her jailor.

But, in this moment of relief, Bourne had ceased to be her jailor. He stood for strength, safety, protection; and she was swept with a longing for the clasp of his hand, the warming reassurance of his voice. She had started to shove aside the door so that she might go out to meet him, when his call came—cheerful, expectant, "Aho, the house; any one awake, this ill—"

She was kneeling beside him, holding him tightly for comfort and confidence his warm body brought to her, when a new and disconcerting thought struck through her joy in her safety. Bourne was here at Taylor's Number Two cabin—and only last night he had started in the opposite direction for Shakespeare George's a hundred miles to the north! Could his advent be sheer coincidence?

A moment of reflection convinced her it was not. It could be nothing but the result of deliberate intent, of calculated deception.

She realized now that no act of hers toward escape had been unknown to him. It was only to throw her off guard that he had ordered the "Aho."

Eagerly, she peered through the aperture. "Why Denny!" he exclaimed, perceiving her face. "What a happy surprise!" This greeting, under the circumstances, was a bit confusing. He laughed. "That was your cue to say, 'Dr. Livingstone, I presume?' He was at the door now. Would you mind letting Tong in for a few minutes, Denny?" His hand dropped to the back of the husky, who was sniffing and snorting rapturously, as he tried to squeeze himself into a reunion with Denny. "I want to fetch my outfit over here. My camp's only a few hundred feet away in the next hollow. I won't be gone long."

He gave the dog a pat and, very casually, turned and strolled out of sight, whistling.

Tongass burst through and leaped into Denny's outstretched arms, whimpering and licking her face in delirious joy. "Oh, Tong!" she cried, hugging him fervently. "I never was so glad to see any one in all my life!"

Harp to go to Shakespeare George's. He had never intended that any one but himself should leave behind that dog team. And the infuriating thing was that he had evaded outright lying about his destination by his diabolically adroit announcement, "I haven't had any real exercise for a month; a run behind the dogs will do me good."

"What a blind fool I was, not to suspect that statement! And his caution in removing the bells from the dog harnesses!" She grew hot with chagrin, thinking how he had caught her twice with the same bait—Shakespeare George. And how he must have laughed to himself when she told him good-by on the hilltop last night. Once she was out of sight, he must have turned round on the upland trail and followed it south, cutting down ahead of Stebbins to this cabin, the first stopping place out of Tarnigan. Here, camped so close that the trapper had smelled the smoke of his fire, he had waited, with bland certitude, to intercept her.

She could not deny that he had saved her from a dreadful fate; but—she told herself hotly—had it not been for his trickery, she need never have been in any danger. By marooning her in Tarnigan, he had forced her into this flight. He might have spared her this terrifying night by stopping her before she got away; but, instead, he had allowed her to go with a drunken renegade trapper: had tortured her like a cat playing with a mouse. And then, to play the hero, he had strutted onto the stage barely in time to avert the tragedy he must have known was bound to come upon her. It did not occur to her that Bourne might never have put in an appearance, had she not needed him. She only saw again that he had contrived to place her at a disadvantage.

"How I hate him for that!" she thought, clenching her hands as she sprang to her feet in a surge of anger. "But I'll never let him know I was afraid. Or even admit that I was in any danger. And I'll fight him as long as I live!"

She heard him drive his dog team into the clearing and keyed herself to resent the first hint of triumph or of criticism in his manner.

He pushed aside the door, making no comment on the fact that it was off its hinges, and came in, holding a blackened coffee-pot by its bail.

"A spot of good, hot java is what my system craves, Denny," he announced cheerfully, going about the business of rekindling the fire in the little stove. "How about you—shall I put your name in the pot?"

The man's faculty for doing the unexpected was maddening. Denny thought, "He's actually going to ignore Stebbins and pretend he doesn't know I was running away." With an effort, she made her voice steady as she responded, "Please do, Captain. I haven't had a thing but boiled tea all day."

"The trapper's drink," he replied. "But a riverman must have his coffee." He continued his preparations, keeping up a running fire of remarks in a matter-of-fact tone, and ending with, "I'm certainly in luck, blundering into you like this."

"Liar!" thought Denny. But she managed a little laugh, and said aloud, "As usual, Captain, your advent was both miraculous and spectacular." Not to be outdone in casualness, she fished her compact from her bag, and by the aid of the tiny mirror in its lid began to powder her nose.

Her gesture seemed lost upon Bourne who, with eyes only for the beverage he was preparing, went on, "You wouldn't have found any one to greet you at Blue Heaven, Denny. You didn't know, of course, but you picked a time for your visit when Clay and Polly Wells are over on Bear Creek, trapping.... One lump or two? Over the coffee he had just poured, he was regarding her with mild inquiry.

"One, please."

He placed the tin mug on a battered tin plate and brought it to her with the air of one presenting the daintiest of service.

She took it in the same manner, thanking him graciously; but she was wondering how he could know what was in that note she had written to Honey-Jo. Then it came to her that he did not know. This was just another phase of his pre-emptive that he was unaware that she was trying to escape from him. In the self-assured tone she so detested, he continued, "But never mind. They'll be home in a couple of months and we can run down together to pay them a visit."

Together! Ye gods, the man was incredible! She wanted to shout at him to cease his dissembling, but fought down the impulse, and forced herself to drink her coffee with an appearance of leisurely enjoyment.

"It is early, Denny. The moon is bright too, and the crust just right for traveling; but my weather instinct tells me there's a snow-storm in the offing. If you are not too tired, what do you say to our hitting the trail for home now, instead of waiting till morning?"

Denny had never been so weary in all her days. Her nerves were shattered. But she was too proud to let Bourne suspect her real condition. Moreover, she was finding this armed truce a greater strain than any physical hardship.

She looked up at him and essayed a smile. "A splendid idea, Captain. I would have suggested it myself, but I thought you might be rather done in after your long journey from Shakespeare George's. I'm ready."

If he noted the sarcastic edge to her voice there was no evidence of it in his quick, warm smile, which again set her seething with vexation.

JAPS KILL 300 IN NEW ATTACK

Chinese Die as Air Bombs Blow Train From Tracks

(By Associated Press)

SHANGHAI, Sept. 8.—At least 300 Chinese non-combatants were killed and 400 injured today in one of the worst disasters caused by Japanese air bombs in the three months of undeclared war.

Five railroad cars, packed with Chinese refugees fleeing from the war zone, were blown from their track by Japanese bombers at Sunkeung station, 30 miles from Shanghai.

Fifteen hundred Chinese were wedged into every inch of the train when the bombs burst in their midst.

Two densely crowded second-class coaches and three third-class cars were shattered by the blast, lifted from the wrecked road bed and turned over.

Many of the occupants not killed by the explosives were crushed to death in the wreckage.

THE HOME KITCHEN

By Jeanette Young Norton

ICE CREAM

Ice cream! What a magic sound those two old-fashioned words have for us all! Babies toddle to the table for it, oldsters totter to enjoy this most delightful and nourishing of foods, and children run lightheartedly when they only hear the word. Buy it at the drug store, crank your own with a freezer or freeze it in an automatic refrigerator. Ice cream is good for us, it is easy to make, it cools us off and it is nourishing.

No better service can this modest column perform than to give some good directions for homemade ice cream, the tastiest kinds, the different kinds.

Date ice cream starts off the cool procession. One cup milk, scalded; flour, one-half teaspoon salt, one-half cup sugar, two tablespoons two eggs, one package pasteurized dates, one cup orange juice, three tablespoons lemon juice and one quart thin cream comprise the ingredients. Mix flour, sugar and salt; stir in scalded milk gradually, stirring till a smooth paste is formed. Cook over hot water until mixture thickens, stirring constantly. Pour mixture over the slightly beaten eggs; cook over hot water for one minute. Strain; add finely-chopped dates and cream. Cool. Add strained fruit juices. Freeze in two quarts.

Grape Fruit Ice

Grapefruit ice — there's a dish for you! One and a half cups sugar, three-quarters cup water, six tablespoons lemon juice and one No. 2 can grapefruit (segments and juice), make the fixings. Cook the sugar, syrup and a cup of the water to the soft ball state (249 F.). Add lemon juice and water. Cool. Cut grapefruit segments into small pieces; add fruit and juice to cooled syrup. Freeze in automatic refrigerator in ice and salt mixture. It makes two quarts.

Maple-pineapple ice cream is a double favorite that takes one cup maple syrup, three-quarters cup canned shredded pineapple (drained), one-third cup dates, one and one-half cups chopped; one and one-half cups whipping cream and one-half cup milk. Add maple syrup to whip cream until it begins to thicken, then fold into first mixture. Pour into freezing tray of automatic refrigerator and when frozen to a mush stir well. Continue freezing until firm. It is enough for six.

In addition to bombs, the ship is armed with five guns. It is manned by a crew of five.

Matt Leach

Dismissal of Matt Leach of Indianapolis, founder and head of the Indiana state police system, following complaints of the federal bureau of investigation regarding the Leach administration resulted in a sharp attack on J. Edgar Hoover and his G-men by Leach. The latter asked that a senate investigation be made of "the personal ambitions of J. Edgar Hoover" and charged that the federal force not only refused to co-operate with the state police but that Hoover deliberately sought to confound the state authorities in their work.

Mrs. Philip Murray Mrs. John L. Lewis

Two of the most interested spectators at the giant Labor Day rally sponsored by the C. I. O. at Pittsburgh were Mrs. Philip Murray, left, wife of the chairman of the Steel Workers' Organizing committee, and Mrs. John L. Lewis, right, wife of the C. I. O. chairman. Both their husbands spoke, Lewis flaying the independent steel companies who fought the SWOC and urging that labor strengthen itself so as to increase the mass purchasing power of all groups. This is one of the few photos ever taken of Mrs. Lewis at a function of this kind.

CHICAGO CUBS SET FOR LAST PENNANT STAND

Giants Seek First Professional Football Victory Over Eastern College All-Stars

COMING SERIES WITH TERRYMEN TO TELL STORY

Cubs Await Games With Giants To Make Last Pennant Drive

By DREW MIDDLETON

The Cubs are going to give the Giants a little party soon and, if the neighbors do their bit, the city slickers from Gotham will go home in a barrel.

Counting heavily on the aid and abettance of the Cards, Pirates and even the lowly Reds, Charlie Grimm's men see the three game series with the New Yorkers, starting Sept. 21 as their entire into the World series. It is their last chance. The gaudy lead of mid-summer has faded to a two and a half game deficit; the once matchless infield is stumbling.

If the west were only a little bit wilder, the Cubs could play close to the chest in Wrigley field and let the Cards and Pirates back them into a pennant. But the Cards are degassed and delovely to the Giants' eyes and the Bucs play like the fat men's team at a church social against the Terry-men.

The schedule shows nine more games for the Cubs with the Cards and as they proved yesterday, the Mississippi Mudcats are the Chicagoans' cousins. That may help. But Boston and Pittsburgh are tough for the Cubs, and there's the inevitable series with the Giants. As they start a whole string of "crocal" series, the Giants have a neat but not gaudy edge.

The Cubs may yet rebound from their latest slump. Certainly they showed signs of it yesterday when Gill Lee staggered through to his 13th victory of the season, defeating the Cardinals 8-5.

In the only other National league game, the Brooklyn Dodgers trimmed the Boston Bees 6-1 in the rubber game of a three game series.

The once-proud Red Sox bowed twice to the Washington Senators 11-5 and 5-4 in the only American league games.

Breezy Briefs Of Sport From Brietz To You

BY EDDIE BRIETZ

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—The Louisville night may wind up with an investigation, after all.... A well-known Broadway columnist wrote he timed the rounds (via radio) and the seventh ran three and a half minutes.... He has been invited down town to tell his story to the boxing commission.... The St. Louis Browns will turn on the axes next season.... Duto the Car.... Philadelphia is dicker for Lorenzo Pack and Tony Galento late this month.... California sports writers agree U. of California will have the top football team on the coast this season.... Lew Riggs of the Reds jumped his batting average 44 points in one afternoon by poling two homers and a pair of singles.

Here's a teaser: Football teams coached by Billy Laval of Emory and Henry never have dropped an opening game.... And teams directed by Don McAllister of South Carolina haven't even been scored on in openers.... So what will happen when the two schools blast the lid off September 25—a scoreless tie?... An autographed photo of Lou Ambers, the lightweight champ, stopped classes in Poughkeepsie (N. Y.) grammar school the other day.... When teacher took the picture away from Eddie Rose, the proud owner, the rest of the class went on a sit-down strike until it was returned.

The guy with the red pan is Steve Owen, coach of the New York football Giants.... Steve had just got through saying a good pro team would beat an All-Star aggregation nine times in ten when the colts dumped the Chicago Bears.... That makes the score for the season, All Stars, 2; Pros 0.... One of the stars of the Leopolds team in the Shawano county league up in Wisconsin is Wally Huebner, one-armed centerfielder.... He plays with the strap of his glove unfastened and after each catch quickly remove the glove to throw the ball back to the infield.... His powerful throwing arm more than offsets the second or so lost in ditching the glove.... At the bat Wally whales the ball at a .475 clip.... Nate Lewis, the "bald eagle" of Chicago's loop and one of the smartest guys in the fight racket, is in town lining up bouts for his heavyweight, Harry Thomas.

Association Opens Drive To Contact New Bowlers

Entry Blank Published Today To Be Filled Out By New Keglers or Sponsors of New Teams

Perhaps you were one of the many persons who last bowling season figured you'd like to join up with a team, but just didn't know where to look or how to go about it.

Well, if such were the case, there's no need of you encountering the same problem this coming season. Believing that there are a great many new bowlers available in Salem and vicinity, officials of the Salem Bowling association are attempting to contact these keggers through a bowling entry blank which is published on the sport page of The News today.

If you have a team you'd like to enter in a league for the 1937-38 season or if you yourself would like to bowl on a team, the association asks you to fill out the entry blank and mail it to W. H. Juergens, 157 West Seventh st., no later than Saturday, Sept. 11.

The blank is to be filled out and forwarded to Juergens only by new bowlers or sponsors of new teams. It is not published for the bowlers and teams of last season's leagues. This latter group is being lined up for the new season by officials of the various leagues.

TENNIS LASSIES WEAKER TODAY

Molla Mallory Says Current Stars Not In With Old Timers

FOREST HILLS, N. Y., Sept. 8.—Some of the girls playing through rain and mud in the national championships look to the untrained eye like pretty good tennis players, and it comes as a shock and a disappointment to learn on high authority that they are selling players compared to the fully-dressed glances who used to roam our courts.

Molla Bjurstedt Mallory, one of the greatest of the old guard, says so, positively. Jadwiga Jedrejewska, the terrible pole, Anita Lazana, the chic Chilean; Alice Marble, Helen Jacobs, Kay Stammers and all the other pretties romping around in shorts these days are about a dime a dozen in Molla's book.

The famous Norseman, who won the American women's championship six times from 1916 to 1926, gave judgment yesterday while watching Helen Jacobs struggle through three sets to defeat Joan Ingram, a chubby English girl who isn't even ranked in her own country.

"How would Suzanne Lenglen have done against the girls playing in this tournament?"

"Why, Suzanne could have cleaned out this field without ever using her backhand," she came back, "I could have cleaned them out myself."

"We had great players in my day," take Suzanne, and take Mary Browne, Elizabeth Ryan, Kitty McKane Godfree and myself. And Helen Wills at the tail end. I honestly don't think any of these girls could have competed with us, even if pictures of us in our long skirts do look funny now."

GRID TEAM AT DARTMOUTH TO BE DANGEROUS

Indians To Have Three Veterans As Nucleus Of 1937 Team

Note: This is one of several stories dealing with prospects of major college football teams.

BY BILL KING

HANOVER, N. H., Sept. 8.—Physically, the Dartmouth Indians will be much weaker during the coming intercollegiate football season than they were last year but before their "ivy league" rivals start cheering, it would be well to heed Earl (Red) Blaik's warning that he will start his fourth season in Hanover with a dangerous and colorful team.

Eleven of the most dependable players on last year's once-beaten club graduated last June so Blaik faces an alarming shortage of seasoned material. But the great majority of last year's reserves have had at least one season under Blaik and his only acute problems are filling in for Fullback Johnny Handrahan and Dave Cameron, the 60-minute left tackle.

The nucleus of the 1937 tribesmen is formed by three of last year's starters, Captain Merrill Davis, right end, left and right halfbacks Fred Hollingworth and Bob MacLeod and Larry Hull, a 1935 regular who is ready to take over the portside wing position after a year of ineligibility.

Blaik has a wealth of promising backfield material to install his new offense, which will probably be 60 per cent overhead, but he will miss the ill-fated Gordon Clark, one of the most consistent passers and punters on last year's squad, who was killed in a recent automobile accident. Herb Christiansen, a sure-fire three-yard plunger, possesses only about a third of Handrahan's all-around ability but he is standing out at Fullback. Harry Gates is the logical successor to Hank Whitaker, the graduated quarterback.

Vernon (Moose) Taylor is a competent tackle but he can not swing into the interference on Blaik's favorite deep reverses as Cameron did, and Francis Schildgren, as yet can not be mentioned in the same breath with Gordon Bennett, last year's courageous leader. The ranking guards, Jim Peely and Gus Zitrides, need another season before they can be expected to do today's game. Jack Williams, the plucky line backer, and Bill Cole and Latia McCray, but Bob Gibson and Otis Mudge, strangely enough, are worthy successors for even such a colorful center as Carl (Mutt) Ray.

Dartmouth's rearranged schedule appears ideal for Blaik and his problems, for his team will not feel any serious pressure until late October, when it will be called upon to face Harvard, Yale and Princeton on successive Saturdays. The two weeks start the Indians have on those "Big Three" rivals will probably stand them in good stead at that stage of the campaign.

The Dartmouth schedule: Sept. 25, Bates; Oct. 2, Amherst; 9, Springfield; 16, Brown at Providence; 23, Harvard at Cambridge; 30, Yale at New Haven; Nov. 6, Princeton at Princeton; 13, Cornell; 20, Columbia at New York.

QUAKER COACH CHOOSES TEAMS FOR FIRST TIME

Blocking Stressed In Salem High School Grid Practice

Scrimmage is not far off for the 40 odd Salem high school gridgers who stepped through their fourth day of pre-season practice out at Centennial park yesterday.

Indications that the rapidly conditioning squad would soon face scrimmage action were seen at the close of yesterday afternoon's practice session when Coach Carl Schroeder lined up teams for the first time since workouts started last Wednesday morning.

Three teams were named by Schroeder to practice the new shift he plans to use in games this season. Plays have not as yet been given the gridgers and consequently all the teams did when lined up was to drill on the shift.

Schroeder planned to hand out several plays yesterday afternoon, but an extensive blocking drill took up so much time that he was forced to postpone this instruction until today's workouts.

Blocking is the theme of all the Quakers' practices. Schroeder intends to have every one of his varsity players thoroughly trained in this phase of the game before he spends any amount of time with other instruction.

Considerable time was spent on blocking drill at both morning and afternoon practices. Other practice activity included running down under punts for tackling and ball-carrying drill.

The teams Schroeder selected for practicing his new shift were picked at random and were not indicative of a possible varsity lineup. The first team he named, however, included all lettermen from last year's team, except Charles Wentz, who was not out for practice because he is working.

The lettermen on the first named team were Mike Cerbu at center, Bob Kirchgessner at right guard, Bill Schaeffer at left end and Bill Malloy and Oliver Oleksa in the backfield.

Oleksa reported for practice for the first time yesterday after returning to Salem Sunday from New York state where he had been working during the summer.

In addition to Oleksa, several other players put in an appearance for the first time yesterday. They are Frank Skowran, John Syppko, George Matsik and Gilbert Everhart.

Skowran is the gridder who suffered a broken collarbone during practice last year. Everhart, a member of last season's Quaker basketball team, has never before been out for football.

Ted Jones, new assistant coach, who was scheduled to be present for yesterday's practices, was unable to arrive in Salem on time, but is expected to be on hand for today's workouts.

The Quakers will go through their last day of double drill today and from now until the end of the season will hold only an afternoon practice. The end of the daily double workouts is due to the fact that the 1937-38 school term opens tomorrow.

Either today or tomorrow, Schroeder plans to select the 28 players for his varsity squad. The remaining gridgers will compose the junior varsity, which will be under the tutelage of a new Junior High school football coach.

Assistant Coach Jones will assist Schroeder with the varsity squad.

The roster of the southern All-Star team is as follows: Kimple, Ash, Watson and Riden of Newell; Mackall, Vocia, Saches and Bourne of the East Liverpool Riverview Florists; R. Duffy, Rose, Wagner and Anderson of the East Liverpool Eagles and Call, Trainor, Mann and McConnell of Wellsville. The East Liverpool Riverview Florists are first half champions of the county circuit, while Newell, W. Va., is the champion of the second half. Both of these clubs contribute their players to the southern team.

PLAYOFF PLANS ARE UP IN AIR

American Association Winners Are As Yet Undecided

COLUMBUS, Sept. 8.—The American association launches its second Shaughnessy playoff next Tuesday night, but just where the two opening contests will be staged still is "up in the air."

At this stage it looks as if Columbus, Minneapolis, Toledo and Milwaukee will battle it out in the post-season series, but the first three are tangled up in the most thrilling pennant scrap the league has ever witnessed, and it's a tough chore figuring out just how they'll finish.

One thing is certain—the opening games will be played in the cities which finish first and second in the flag chase. The top berth team will meet the third placers, while the runners-up will play host to the first division tail-enders.

President George Trautman of the loop said today that should Minneapolis play Milwaukee, and Toledo play Columbus, the first series would be on a 2-3-2 basis. He explained that the first two games of the "four out of seven" series would be played in the city finishing highest in the final standing, and that the teams would then shift to the other city for the next three contests. Should more be necessary to decide the winner, the teams would move back to the first city for the remaining tilts. But, should Columbus meet Minneapolis, and Milwaukee play Toledo, or Columbus scrap it out with Milwaukee while the Millers clashed with the Mudhens, the first three games would be played in the home city of the highest ranking club, while the remaining tilts would be on the other team's home lot.

The winners of the first two series will meet in a second "four out of seven" engagement, with the victor to meet the International league's Shaughnessy playoff victors in the junior world series.

Trautman said three umpires would be assigned to each of the preliminary play-offs, with four arbiters working the second series to decide the league's representative in the junior world series. In the latter event two American association and two International loop umpires will call the decisions.

COLLEGE GRID TEAM TO FACE PROS TONIGHT

Eastern All-Stars Meet New York Giants In Charity Game

NEW YORK, Sept. 8.—Seeking success where two other professional football teams have failed this season, the New York gridiron Giants battle an eastern All-Star college eleven for the benefit of charity under the Polo grounds lights tonight.

Within the last week, the Green Bay Packers and Chicago Bears have bowed to college stars who studied the football fields of the country last year, showing for the first time in major competition that the boys who play for pay can be whipped by a high-class college outfit.

Tonight's game, the second for the benefit of the Herald-Tribune fresh air fund, pits the best of the last, selected by Andy Kerr of Colgate, against a seasoned team with youngsters in their debuts as pros. With cool weather predicted, some 40,000 fans are expected to witness the renewal of the series won by the Giants in mid-summer temperature last year.

Both teams will present lines averaging over 200 pounds but the Giants will have an advantage in the backfield largely because Kerr has announced his intention of starting Monk Meyer, Army's 140-pound ace. The wily Colgate mentor has built much of his attack around the passing ability of Meyer and his reserve, Mickey Kobrosky, Trinity college ace.

For end runs and off tackle slants, Kerr has a host of good backs, including Vannie Albano of Syracuse, Stu Smith of Bucknell, Joe Dulkie of Fordham, John Handrahan of Dartmouth, Lew Elverson and Fran Murray of Penn. Chick Kaufman of Princeton and Bob Larue of Pitt.

In the line Kerr will have probably the best college pass receiver of recent years in Larry Keller, Yale's great opportunist. With 67 men on the squad, the All-Star coach plans to keep his men fresh, throwing in an entire new eleven if necessary.

Against the collegians, the Giants will send a team wise in the ways of the gridiron. Only three members of the starting lineup will be rookies: Will Walls of Texas Christian and Jim Poole of Mississippi at ends and Tarzan White of Alabama at guard.

Coach Steve Owen has a wealth of newcomers on his squad, however, and plans to give most of them a chance. They include such famous college players as Ed Widseth of Minnesota, Gerry Dennerlin of St. Mary's and Jim Gelatka of Miss. State.

CHICAGO GRAIN
CHICAGO, Sept. 8.—With war scare talk at least temporarily subsiding, wheat values receded late today, and in most cases new gains were more than wiped out.
Heavy chartering of vessel space by Russia had a bearish effect on wheat. Besides, notices of intentions to deliver about 500,000 bushels of wheat on Chicago September-ber contracts tomorrow were announced.

At the close, wheat was 1/4 cents lower to 1/2 higher compared with yesterday's finish, Sept. 198 1/2, c. 1.10%, corn 3/4 off to 1/4 up, Sept. 1.05% 3/4-1%, and oats 1/2-1/4 advanced.

CAPTURE OHIO BANK ROBBER

Elyria Officer Nabs Bandit; Fellow Patrolman Wounded

(By Associated Press)
ELYRIA, Sept. 8.—Police Chief E. J. Stankard said today the 20-year-old gunman who seriously wounded Patrolman Myron Gibson confessed orally that he staged the single-handed robbery of the Woodville State Savings bank yesterday.

He gave the name of Robert Jones, 20, and said he had no home. He was booked at county jail on charge of bank robbery. Patrolman Clellan E. Andrews, bare-handed, tackled and captured the man despite two guns blazing in the prisoner's hands.

Used As Shield
A wheel came off the man's stolen auto in front of a lumber company here. The proprietor, C. A. Persons, became suspicious and called police. Patrolmen Gibson and Andrews responded.

The gunman stuck a pistol in Andrews' back and used him as a shield while he shot Gibson down. Patrolman Myron Gibson, 60, fought for his life today in the hospital here.

Jones took Andrews' gun and forced him to drive away in the police car. The man sat beside Andrews pointing two guns at him. "I figured he would shoot me and dump me out in the country," Patrolman Andrews said later. "We had gone about half a mile when his guns sort of swerved."

"I knew I would have to do it sooner or later. So I grabbed the guns by the barrels and he started firing."

The thug fired four times with each gun. Andrews' sleeve was black with powder burns.

$2,113 on Gunman
"I twisted the guns as hard as I could," Andrews said. "The car went into a ditch. I held my knee against his chest. I saw a farmer and yelled for help. He came over and took the guns. I put the handcuffs on him and that's all there was to it."

Found on the gunman was $2,113.17.

Andrews is 28 years old, the youngest member of the Elyria police force.

COUNTY FORMS NEW AID UNIT

E. Liverpool Girl Named Supervisor of Bureau of Assistance

Judge Explains Set-up
Miss Schneider will assume her duties here Sept. 20. She will be in charge of the administration of aid for dependent children and blind relief. The first has been a responsibility of the juvenile court and the latter administered through the county commissioners. County visitors now employed under these programs will be retained under the new arrangement, it is said.

In commenting on the set-up Judge Hammond said "this arrangement will permit a full and complete coordination of all matters pertaining to public assistance in Columbiana county. It will avoid duplication of effort in making investigations and will render a higher degree of efficiency in the operation of each of these programs."

The board, in the near future, hopes to extend the activities of the office to include care, treatment and control of the feeble-minded in the county. Other problems hinging on an enlightened social program in the county also may be brought under its jurisdiction.

School Pupils In "Sit-Down" Strike

(By Associated Press)
LORAIN, Sept. 8.—Forty-four school children of nearby Elyria township were on a "sit-down strike" today in front of the closed Murray Ridge school.

Backed by their parents, the students demanded that the Lorain county school board reopen the two-room building. They refused to attend a centralized school to which they had been transferred.

Mrs. Elmer Beal, one of the parents involved, said they received insufficient notice of the change and intended to combat it.

Yesterday, the first day of school, the 44 pupils, almost the entire enrollment, carried their books to the closed school, sat outside the doors for more than an hour, then went home. Today they did the same thing.
